AGAWAM, Mass., Sept. 23 – OMG Roofing Products has unveiled its first distance learning course for RCI members. The course, entitled “Retrofit Roof Drains,” is free to registered roof consultants, available on-line and offers a convenient way to earn Continuing Education Hours (CEH) from the RCI.

“Roof drainage is a fundamental element of sound roof design practices,” said Dan Genovese, product manager for OMG. “Our first distance learning program is a comprehensive overview of roof drain use when approaching new and low slope re-roofing projects.”

The distance learning program addresses a variety of issues including proper design, important specification considerations, proper measurement techniques, performance testing methods, ANSI/SPRI Standard RD-1, Factory Mutual guidelines, typical installation, preventative maintenance and solutions to ponding water issues. The presentation includes a variety of illustrative drawings, charts and photographs.

RCI members interested in taking the 1-credit, hour-long, course can register on-line at www.olyfast.com/continuingeducation.aspx. Upon successful completion of the course and test, OMG will provide qualified participants with a certificate of completion and a 12-inch metal architectural scale.
