OMG Offers Free Distance Learning Course for AIA and RCI Continuing Education Credits

-- Free Writing Journal to Qualified Participants --

AGAWAM, Mass., February, 2009 – OMG Roofing Products, a registered provider of on-line courses, has developed a distance learning course on adhesive technology for roof insulation. The course, entitled “Adhesive Attachment of Insulation,” is free to AIA members and registered roof consultants, and offers a convenient way to earn Continuing Education Hours (CEH) from the RCI, and Learning Units (LU) for HSW credit from the AIA.

“Insulation adhesives are a fundamental element of many roof specifications,” said Andy Cleveland, product manager for OMG. “This course provides a comprehensive overview of dual component adhesives used in low slope roofing applications.”

The distance learning program addresses a variety of issues including proper design, important specification considerations, installation methods, substrate and insulation compatibility as well as the ANSI/SPRI IA-1 2005 standard. The presentation includes a variety of illustrative drawings, charts and photographs.

AIA and RCI members interested in taking the course for continuing education credits should register on-line at www.olyfast.com/continuingeducation.aspx. Upon successful completion of the course and test, OMG will provide qualified participants with a certificate of completion and a bound 7 x 10-inch writing journal.
